A force of America's B-29 Super-Fortress bombers roared into the Japanese homeland today blasting strategic targets on the island of Kyushu.

The important Japanese naval base of Sasebo is located on Kyushu.

The important Japanese naval base of Sasebo is located on Kyushu which marks the southern tip of the enemy's home islands. Principal cities of Kyushu are Nagasaki, one of Japan's 13 most important ports, Kagoshima, and Fukuoka.

The brief announcement of the Kyushu raid by Gen. H. H. Arnold, commanding general of the 20th airforce contained no details but it was presumed that the targets attacked included Sasebo which was struck previously by the gigantic bombers operating from their China bases. There was no mention of the number of planes that raided Kyushu.

Kyushu lies south of the main Japanese island of Honshu where the enemy capital of Tokyo is located.

Fourth B-29 Raid

It was the fourth time that the B-29's have unloaded their tons of destruction on the important Japanese island, and the first time the big bombers have been in operation since they blasted Formosa in coordination with carrier-based planes in preparation for the Philippines invasion.

The last time Kyushu was struck by the Super-Fortresses was Aug. 20-21 when they blasted the island in a coordinated day-night attack.

Radio Tokyo broadcast a communique admitting damage had been inflicted by some 100 super-fortresses.

"The war results are now under investigation. There was some damage on our side," according to the enemy broadcast intercepted by the FCC.

TEMPO OF FIGHT RISING RAPIDLY OFF PHILIPPINES

carrier aircraft and incomplete reports indicate that all battleships were damaged by bombs, at least one was hit by a torpedo and one cruiser was torpedoed. Nimitz reported.

The torpedoed vessels may have sunk later, thus giving rise to the Japanese report that three of the enemy ships had gone down in the battle.

A second enemy force was sighted in the Sulu sea, southwest of Negros island which consisted of two battleships, one cruiser and four destroyers. Both battleships were damaged by bombs and the light units were severely strafed.

In the late afternoon of the same day, a third enemy force was located southeast of Formosa approaching from Japanese home waters.

Brought To Action

"On Oct. 24 the enemy forces were brought to action," Nimitz reported. "Reports which are as yet incomplete indicate that severe damage has been inflicted on the enemy, that at least one of his large carriers has been sunk and two others have been severely damaged. General action is continuing."

Eastward movement of ships in the Sibuyan and Sulu seas, observers pointed out, indicates that the Japanese are attempting to place themselves on the inside of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's invasion forces on Leyte island and any of our naval forces which might be outside the island chain to the far eastward.

The Sulu sea, one of the largest expanses of enclosed waters in the Philippines, is directly west of Mindanao, most southerly island of the archipelago, and northeast of Borneo.

The Sibuyan sea, in the heart of the Philippines, washes the shores of Panay island to the south, Mindoro to the west and Luzon and Leyte to the north and east respectively.

Since the communiqué said that our carrier planes have attacked the enemy naval forces in waters inside the flank of the Philippines, there was a possibility that United States carriers from which the planes are operating also might be inside this land shield.

The last time the Japanese fleet ventured from its innermost bases was two weeks ago when Halsey and Mitscher were blasting the Japs in the Ryukyus and on Formosa. At that time the Tokyo radio made the utterly fantastic claim that the attacking American fleet and planes were annihilated.

Prior to that, the Japanese fleet came out of hiding on June 19 following the American invasion of Saipan. Although the enemy fleet avoided a head-on clash with the United States fleet, Mitscher's carrier planes inflicted heavy punishment on the Mikado's fleet, which never ventured within range of the pursuing American Navy. At least two fleeing Jap carriers were sunk and other enemy ships were severely damaged.

ARMY PROBING CRIMES AGAINST YANKEE FLIERS

pelled from the country on orders of the Soviet commander.

This was later described in the state department as a difficulty arising over a "technicality," which has now been cleared up.

It was said today that, so far as is known in the state department, the new mission investigating treatment of prisoners has not been obstructed by Soviet officials.

The total number of American prisoners evacuated from Bulgaria is estimated at 200. The wounded were taken by train to Istanbul, where they told the story of their mistreatment.

around town the hunters have flushed everything from frightened householders to two fleet foxes in the pants burglar's favorite area of operations.

Wholesale and retail food dealers seem to be his favorite people since they have figured in more than half of his one-sided "business deals."

"The pants burglar" has become a household name in the neighborhood of his most persistent breaking and entering. He is the reason for the last-minute double check of doors and windows at night and in many cases for the burning of porch lights all night long.

Now that the considerate pants burglar has decided to give his nerves and the police a break, householders have settled down to speculating on whether he is one man or two men or three men. Few believe that the robberies are a one-man job.

They are hoping that the pants burglar will be a good sport and write to the police soon to clear up this point. The police themselves don't care whether he is a quintuplet—all they want to know is who he is and where he can be found, preferably while hard at work.

After two years of negotiations including a bitter court fight, South Central Rural Electric Cooperative association and two other cooperatives have completed purchase of the Ohio Midland Light and Power company of Canal Winchester.

The cooperative paid $2,115,000 to the Associated Electric company of New York, former owner of Ohio-Midland.

Red Pence Rescues Boy Of Four From Cistern At Pontious Farm Sale

Robert Allen, 4, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Allen, Route 2, Circleville, owed his life Wednesday to the quick action of Leroy (Red) Pence, 17, South end resident.

The large crowd attending the Gertrude Pontious sale on Route 22 Tuesday afternoon was thrown into a panic when it was learned that the Allen child had fallen into a cistern. Pence jumped into the cistern, picked up the child and held it above the water until other persons in the crowd pulled the child to safety. Then, Pence was pulled out of the water.

The near tragic accident was discovered when someone saw another child looking down into the cistern. Further check showed that a child was in the water. Young Pence went into action.

The crowd showed its appreciation to the young hero by presenting him with $27 taken up in a collection.

Tag of Isolationism Pinned On Roosevelt By Dewey In Vote Bid

at least one European statesman to say there was then nothing ahead in Europe but war.

Gov. Dewey announced that his farm speech, originally scheduled for last night, would be delivered over the radio from Albany Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Dewey's aides said his Chicago talk will deal with "corrupt use of governmental power to achieve perpetuation in office," together with use, for the same purpose, of federal money, agencies and favors.

The Republican nominee chose the home state of Sen. Joseph H. Ball, whose endorsement of President Roosevelt has created a furor in Minnesota politics, to turn loose the heaviest blast of the campaign against the Roosevelt foreign policies.

He also chose that state to declare that our participation in the world organization for peace "must not be subject to a reservation that would require our representative to return to congress for authority every time he had to make a decision."

Peace Program

"Obviously," he added, "congress, and only congress, has the constitutional power to determine what quota of forces it will make available, and what discretion it will give our representative to use that force."

Gov. Dewey now has gone as far as President Roosevelt on the question of authority to act on the part of the U. S. representative on the projected United Nations Council. Party leaders predicted his stand will nullify the desertion of Sen. Ball by persuading independents that the best chance for an effective world peace lies in the election of a Republican president who would cooperate with a Republican congress.

"I have not the slightest doubt," said Gov. Dewey, "that a congress which is working in partnership with the President will achieve the result we all consider essential and grant adequate power for swift action to the American representative."

"Trifle" With Hope

"But those who would attempt to ride rough-shod over congress and to dictate the course it should follow before it even has been acquainted with the facts are trifling with the hope of the world."

"They are deliberately, in my judgment, seeking to precipitate a hardening of minds. If this stubborn course is pursued, it can only result once again, as in 1919, in a disastrous conflict between the president and the congress."

Charging that President Roosevelt in his Saturday night speech "once again sowed among us the seeds of disunity," Gov. Dewey asserted that Mr. Roosevelt in 1933 inherited a progressively improving structure of international cooperation, which he proceeded to break down.

He said that the President declared in 1933 that "we are not members of the League of Nations and we do not contemplate membership," that he rejected the previously established policy of collaboration with the league, and that, in 1935, the Democratic congress scrapped the policy of consultation with other nations for the "fruitless" neutrality act, which Mr. Roosevelt signed.

Despite reports of growing danger from our representatives in Berlin and Tokyo between 1933 and 1939 and the pleas of army chiefs of staff for adequate funds, Gov. Dewey said those funds were whittled down each year.

Army Appropriations

President Roosevelt, he asserted, "conveniently forgot" that he told congress in January, 1940, that $1,800,000,000 would be enough for national defense, and referred to Mr. Dewey's call for a two-ocean navy as "just plain dumb."

With France about to fall before the Nazi blitz, he tried to send home the congress, which remained to pass the selective service act and appropriate twelve billion dollars for defense, Mr. Dewey said.

The Republican nominee lashed out at the Roosevelt administration for permitting huge shipments of scrap and oil to Japan at a time that nation was preparing to attack us.

"It was in the year of 1934, he said, "that Japan served notice of termination of the limitation treaty which kept her navy inferior to ours. Yet, it was in the first two administrations of the New Deal that this country sent 10 million tons of scrap iron and steel to Japan, unchecked by my opponent until October 16, 1940. The weight of that scrap iron alone was 10 times the tonnage of the whole Japanese army."

"Mr. Roosevelt said last Saturday that we could have 'compromised' with Japan 'by selling out the heart's blood of the Chinese people.' Well, let's see what he did."

"In addition to scrap iron, he permitted the shipment of as much as three million barrels a month of oil, the heart's blood of war, for use against China and for storage against America. It continued to flow until July of 1941, four months before Pearl Harbor."

"Let those who claim to have exercised great foresight remember these lessons in history. And let us as a nation never forget them."

KYUSHU ISLAND IS TARGET FOR GREAT BOMBERS

American Doughboys Drive Ahead On All Invasion Sectors Of Leyte

a. m. to 11:30, and a Domei agency dispatch related that, "about 100 planes of the China-based American air forces raided Kyushu and Saishu islands."

American doughboys are driving forward on all invasion sectors of Leyte island in the Philippines and have captured a third air-drome on the strategic island, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced.

The veteran Seventh Division, of Attu, Kiska and Kwajalein glory seized San Pablo air-drome after penetrating the Jap lines several miles inland from the coastal beachheads.

The seventh, after overrunning San Pablo air-drome, fanned out to the north toward the town of Dagmi.

Meanwhile, to the north, Maj. Gen. Franklin C. Seitz' tenth corps, which includes the First Cavalry Division and the 24th Infantry Division, officially was reported to have made "substantial gains" to the west of Palo and Leyte's capital, Tacloban.

"Small scale enemy counterattacks and night infiltration attempts were readily repulsed," Gen. MacArthur announced in his Wednesday communiqué.

Developments in the Pacific overshadowed the sustained autumn offensive in Europe. American Fifth Army troops seized Monte Belmonte guarding the approaches to Bologna in Northern Italy.

In the Netherlands, the British Second Army battled closer to the vital communications center of Hertogenbosch, and Canadians further constructed the Nazis grasp on waterways to the inland port of Antwerp.

Relative quiet prevailed from Aachen to Southern France, but on the Eastern front Russian forces launched a devastating artillery barrage against the city of Gumbinnen on the road to Insterburg as the Red Army slashed deeper into East Prussia.

Intensified fighting was reported on the world's newest war front along the Franco-Spanish border. Spanish Republicans, battling to overthrow the regime of Generalissimo Franco, claimed an extension of their fight into the key cities have not yet been announced.

During the next two weeks before election Mr. Roosevelt patently will concentrate his full efforts to capturing the deciding electoral votes in the highly populated industrial East, the Ohio valley, and Mid-Western states.

The vigor and thoroughness with which he intends carrying the fight into these states was made clear with announcement by Robert E. Hannegan, the Democratic national committee chairman, that the President will make a series of platform appearances—a complete departure from his wartime custom—during his journeys to the cities where he will make his major appeals for reelection.

He will make a swing through Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Indiana and Illinois, with appearances at Wilmington, Del., Camden, N. J., and Fort Wayne, Ind.

The Wilmington stop will be made sometime Friday morning when Mr. Roosevelt is enroute to Philadelphia. The Camden appearance will come during his tour of the Philadelphia area.

Then enroute to Chicago early Saturday afternoon, he will make his platform appearance at Fort Wayne.

"I APPEAL FOR YOUR SUPPORT"

Dear friend:

I am asking election as your Congressman. I appeal for your support regardless of politics. Naturally, you are entitled to know something about a man who asks for your help, but as much as I should like to do so, it is impossible to see all the voters within such a short time.

Here is my history in a few words: I was born in Perry County, grew up on a farm near New Lexington, attended the public schools, graduated from the local high school and from the College of Law, Ohio State University. Since that time, except for a period of service with the United States Department of Justice, I have practiced law in New Lexington, where I live with my wife and two sons.

My father, Judge Mell G. Underwood, had the honor of representing this Congressional District. It is an important District and its interests and your views must be represented in Congress by a capable Congressman. I know that to win I must have the support of all my friends, Republicans and Democrats alike.

I am grateful for the favors of the past. Whether I win or lose, I want to thank all my loyal friends for their help and assistance. If you can mark an X before my name and ask your friends to do likewise, I assure you the favor will be greatly appreciated and remembered. I have made a clean fight and stand squarely upon my record for election.

I consider it an honor and privilege to represent the 11th District in Congress. Please remember that if elected, I will be your representative. If I can be of service to you or your friends at any time, do not hesitate to call upon me.

I appeal for your support and that of your friends for election and trust you will give my candidacy your fair and honest consideration.

Thanking you for your vote and a kind word, I am

Sincerely yours,

MELL G. UNDERWOOD, Jr.

My best Friends were amazed ... at my improved Looks ... new ENERGY.. PEP!

1—Promote the flow of vital digestive juices in the stomach

2—Energize your body with RICH, RED BLOOD!

Improper diet, overwork, undue worries, colds, the flu or other illness often impairs the stomach's digestive functions and reduces the red-blood strength.

A person who is operating on only a 20 to 25% healthy blood volume or a stomach digestive capacity of only 50 to 60% normal is severely handicapped. At such times Nature needs extra help to restore its balance and function properly. Undigested food places a tax on the system...insufficient blood strength is a detriment to good health.

If you are subject to poor digestion or suspect deficient red-blood as the cause of your trouble, yet have no organic complication or focal infection, SSS Tonic may be just what you need! SSS Tonic is especially designed (1) to promote the flow of VITAL DIGESTIVE JUICES in the stomach and (2) to build-up BLOOD STRENGTH when deficient. These two important results enable you to enjoy the food you do eat...to make use of it as Nature intended. Thus you may get new vitality... pep... become animated... more attractive!

Build Sturdy Health and Help America Win

Thousands and thousands of users have testified to the benefits SSS Tonic has brought to them and scientific research shows that it gets results—that's why so many say "SSS Tonic builds sturdy health—makes you feel like yourself again." At drug stores in 10 and 20 oz. sizes. © S.S.S. Co.

INDUSTRIAL WAR PENALTIES

MAJOR George Fielding Eliot, military writer and broadcaster, touches a popular chord when he says that Germany must not be allowed to rebuild her heavy industries after this war. He has slight patience with people who would grant a "soft peace" to the Germans after the bitterly hard war to which they have subjected other nations.

Addressing a national group of metal manufacturers, he has emphasized the grim slaughter to which the Nazis have subjected so many millions of non-combatants. He sees no reason for sentimentalism. If American and British credit are to be used for rebuilding European industry, the beneficiaries, he says, should be Czechoslovaks, Belgians, Swedes and other nations "do not use the tools which they are given to slaughter children." He bitterly condemns the Germans for still using robot bombs and killing women and children when no military purpose is to be gained thereby.

Without their heavy industry, he says, the Germans will not live in luxury, but can get along about as well as they have done in their years of substituting guns for butter. And he concludes with this memorable observation: "I have never heard that a convicted criminal is entitled to be maintained by the community at a luxury standard of living."

There have been occasions when some Americans have maintained that alien enemies in this country were so maintained.

POLITICAL DOG FIGHTS

OUR political candidates in these closing days of the campaign are inclined to get rather rough. Both Dewey and Roosevelt have belabored each other, in their speeches, with a vigor and frankness seldom heard at such high political levels. In presidential contests of past years there has generally been an effort on both sides to preserve dignity and propriety. And our people in general, while not adverse to a healthy dog fight, still have a sense of shame when the fellows at the top start calling names and kicking each other around.

The average American, for the rest of the campaign, would prefer to hear from the contestants logic instead of wrath, and issues instead of personalities.

WASHINGTON Report

Too Much Inexpert Talking About Peace, Writer Finds
Peace More Matter of Words Than War, Which Is Action!

By HELEN ESSARY
Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON—You might almost believe, as you listen to the word "peace" being batted around by statesmen and prophets, that this was a game of badminton or baseball and not the most hateful war in history, that we are finishing up.

The gentlemen and the ladies, too, who like to seem profound, talk about "a hard peace" or "a soft peace" as brightly as if they were discussing "a hard ball" or "a soft ball" being thrown by a favorite athlete in a championship game.

Most of these ladies and gentlemen who know so well how to re-arrange the world have been rather like the spectators at the game. They have been onlookers.

Few men who have done actual fighting in the war have complete convictions about "what we've got to do when this war is over."

Always peace has been a state of perfection which people seem to have talked about hopefully and then given up as an impossibility.

Just to prove this point of mine I looked up "Peace" in Bartlett's Familiar Quotations.

Bartlett's lists about 200 quotations on "Peace." Next I turned to "War" in the same book. I found about 120 references thereto. Obviously, as I said before, peace is more a matter of words than is war. War is action. Peace is sitting about arguing in highly charged phrases, sometimes at so much a phrase.

The poets generally, judging by Bartlett, refer to "sweet peace," "a solemn peace," "a dream peace," "a heavenly peace." Some optimistic rhytmists speak of an "imperishable peace," "the chimera of an eternal peace," and a "thousand years of peace." Shakespeare, a realistic fellow, described "the cankers of a calm world and

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON—Governor Dewey's efficient campaign team shows the effect of something which they won't admit—namely, that he has been running for President since 1937.

He has put his team together player by player, like a good football coach. There are writers, researchers, economists, publicists, scholars and journalists. Each man has his specialty, each knows he must stay in his place, not move over the line into another man's field.

When Dewey and suave, tough-tempered Herbert Brownell decide that the GOP candidate is to make a speech, the team starts clicking. There is little waste motion.

First, the team huddles. It includes industrious, quiet, studious John Burton, chief researcher and also New York State budget director; keen-eyed Elliott Bell, principal ghost-writer, who is to Dewey what Colonel House was to Woodrow Wilson; Personal Secretary Paul Lockwood, the man with the best political sense in the entourage; tense, hawk-like, bespectacled young Jim Hagerty, ex-New York Times man; Hickman Powell, who describes himself as Dewey's "friend," was once chief ghost writer and now occupies a somewhat minor role.

AIDES GO INTO HUDDLE

Huddles are held in Albany's rather stuffy gubernatorial mansion study or, in good weather, at the swimming pool behind the mansion, built originally for Franklin Roosevelt. Each man hears Dewey's ideas on the theme of the talk, discusses his own ideas briefly. None presses too hard, all know Dewey cracks down on persistent people.

After the huddle, the team gets to work. Lockwood arranges the travel details, gets in touch with state chairmen, orders the train, bounces around like a mother hen over the rest of the brood. Elliot Bell meets with Dewey alone, discusses ideas further. Burton takes his staff to the eleventh floor of the De Witt Clinton hotel, briefs them on the speech, turns them loose digging up facts and figures, researching for damaging target areas in the New Deal no-man's land.

After 48 hours, all drafts, memos, facts and figures go to Bell. He takes phrases and facts from the best memos, then whips up a draft of his own. This is the first draft Dewey sees.

EXPERTS FOR EVERYTHING

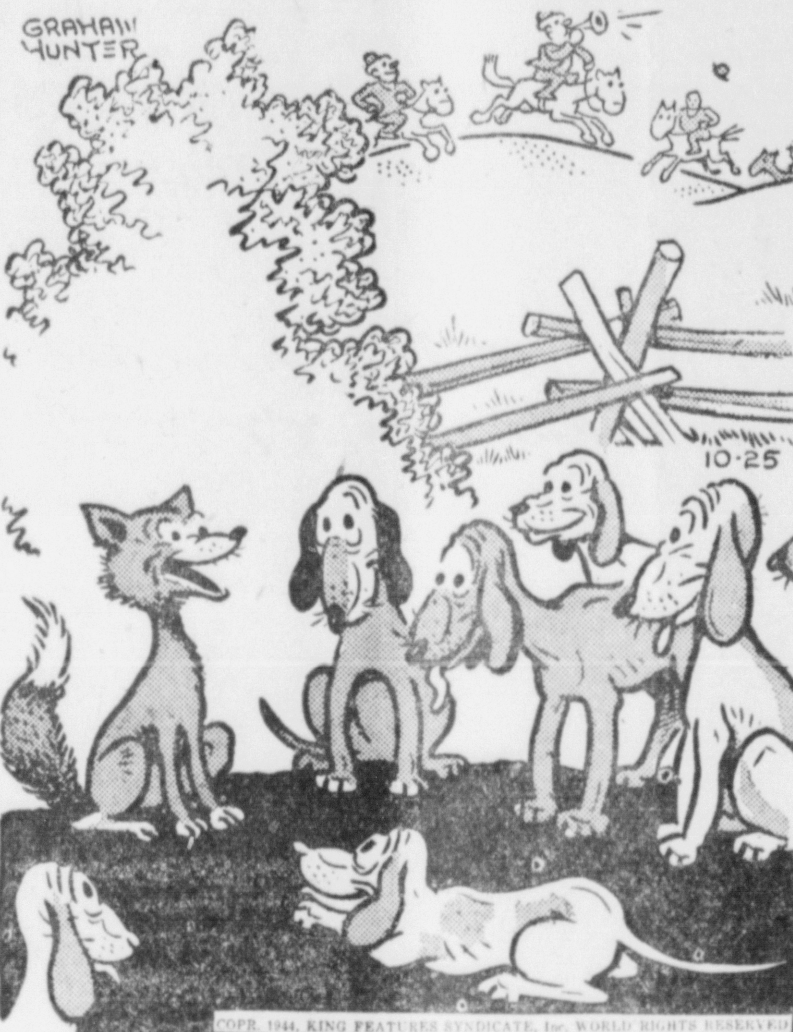

When speeches are being prepared, Bell, Lockwood and Dewey huddle with Budget Director Burton, plus whoever is the chief expert on the speech on hand. For farm speeches, the expert is Hickman Powell; for Labor speeches, it's Mel Petzele; for economics, it's Bell and Burton themselves; for foreign policy speeches John Foster Dulles.

Bell and Dewey read over the product, then retire to whip up another and perhaps final draft. This goes to Burton for rechecking on facts and figures, to Lockwood for ideas on what political bruises it might leave, to quiet, pipe-puffing Harold Keller for final "copy-reading," to check possible errors, and then to Publicist Jim Hagerty and, occasionally, Poll-Taker George Gallup for ideas on news value.

Before any speech is released to the press, Mrs. Dewey sees a draft and makes suggestions. She is considered a barometer of how the average woman voter will react.

Heartburn Studied

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

planation upon symptoms and conditions that had long been familiar, but the causes of which were not entirely understood.

Such is the case with the symptom long known as heartburn. If you ever lived in the more remote parts of the Ozark mountains of Missouri you might not understand unless it was referred to as "water brash." Sour stomach is also used, although because the stomach is always sour, at least acid, this term does not appeal to purists.

It is supposed to be associated with acid dyspepsia or possibly ulcer, although this is not 100 per cent true. What it consists of, to get down to facts, is the rising up of or regurgitation of acid material into the throat after a more or less full meal. The acid, which is nothing more than the normal hydrochloric acid of the stomach contents, gives a sensation of burning up and down the esophagus and over the heart region, hence the name heartburn.

Familiar Symptom

It is, as I say, a familiar symptom, long known to stomach specialists, as well as the unlearned general public and both the stomach specialists and the general public know it is relieved by soda and milk of magnesia and other alkalis. Expectant others in the early stages of pregnancy are very badly annoyed by it often, and that is the circumstance that gave two Denver physicians, Dr. John R. Evans and Dr. John S. Bouslog, the idea of investigating it in order to relieve the discomfort of some of their very intractable cases. They brought the X-ray in to help their investigation.

There has long been known a condition of herniation of the abdominal organs through the diaphragm. The diaphragm is the muscle which lies between the chest and the abdomen, separating off the two sets of organs. It moves up and down in breathing and is probably the most important muscle used to alternately expand and collapse the lungs in respiration. Of course it must be air tight and there is some mechanical difficulty about this at the point where the esophagus goes through it to join with the stomach. Sometimes the place of opening through which the esophagus goes, gives way, allowing the stomach and some of the intestines to go up into the chest. This is the condition of diaphragmatic hernia.

Hiatus Hernia

But the X-ray investigators, in watching great numbers of people who are swallowing opaque meals, found that quite a large percentage who could not be said to have a diaphragmatic hernia have a high placement of the esophagus so that part of the stomach, especially when distended, is found about the diaphragm in the lower part of the chest. This is called hiatus hernia and probably five per cent of the human race is more or less affected in this way. It can easily be seen that the abdominal distention of pregnancy would predispose to this condition.

Whenever any of these hiatus hernia folk eat a little too much the stomach rises above the diaphragm and a cough or a little extra pressure brings acid stomach contents up the relaxed esophagus into the back of the throat, constituting heart burn.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

B. E. J.—You mention mumps, measles, whooping cough and scarlet fever as the principle diseases of childhood. Is not chickenpox one of the contagious diseases that few people escape from? Is this disease one that might have serious results without proper care?

Answer: Chickenpox is, of course, one of the common contagious diseases of childhood, but the least dangerous or serious. It has practically no serious sequelae.

SYNOPSIS

When Drue Cable learned her former husband, Craig Brent, was the victim of a so-called accidental bullet, she persuaded her friend and fellow nurse, Sarah Keate, to answer with her the call made by Dr. Claud Chivory from a small New England town. Sarah was unaware of Drue's previous connection with the Brent family which included Craig's father, Conrad; Alexia, Conrad's glamorous young wife who, at one time, had hoped to marry Craig; Nicky Senour, Alexia's twin brother; and Peter Huber, a friend of Craig. Anna Haub, maid at the Brent mansion, told how Craig was found in the garden the previous night, adding, "Beevens, the butler, said it was an accident—Mr. Craig was cleaning a gun." Alexia ordered Drue to leave before Conrad Brent discovered her presence. Drue told Sarah the strange story of her romance with Craig. They married more than a year ago and Conrad Brent disapproved. Craig's work in the diplomatic service summoned him to Washington, and Drue returned to New York.

Shortly after she received a letter from Conrad (which he claimed Craig asked him to write) stating his son had resigned to enter aviation training, only to discover married men were ineligible. Conrad said Craig wished Drue to divorce him, but promised they could remarry when the training period was over. Drue got the divorce but never received any reply to the letters she wrote Craig. Now, she is determined not to leave until Craig regains consciousness and can talk with her. Dr. Chivory told the state trooper that the bullet he removed from Craig's shoulder was accidentally thrown away; the gun, too, is missing. He warned Sarah not to repeat anything the patient might say in delirium. Later, Craig mumbled something about "yellow gloves." From the window, Sarah saw Drue disappear behind a hedge in the garden and emerge soon with something hidden beneath her cape. A few minutes later Drue entered the sick room just as Craig cried out, "But that's murder! Tell Claud. There'll be murder done." Drue attempted to question him but he lapsed into drugged sleep again. Sarah is summoned by Conrad Brent and follows Beevens into the library, as Maud Chivory, the doctor's wife, is leaving. Sarah is telling the story.

CHAPTER TEN

My first feeling was a wave of sheer self-amazement that I had had the enormous temerity to call him, flippantly to Drue, Papa Brent. My second was another kind of shock; I found myself instantly, yes, flinched and moved back of his bright eyes and one hand reached out toward the tall back of a chair near him. He said, "He's not going to die," and looked at me as if daring me to deny it, but it had frightened him all the same.

"Twenty-four hours—thirty-six at the most will tell the tale. If things go well, there's not much for us to do, only routine. If things go wrong, that's different. I'd advise you to let her stay. Besides, he knows she's here." That told on him too; I saw it again in the flash, away back in his eyes.

"I thought he was unconscious. Chivory told me he would be unconscious for some time."

something else entirely; something that had nothing to do with reason. In fact, it didn't seem to have anything to do with me; it was just an intangible thing that hovered in the very air of that room. The queer part of it, of course, was that it should be intelligible to me. I am never present; I have a good stomach, no nerves and little imagination.

Beevens closed the door behind me, and Conrad Brent said, "My wife tells me that the nurse who accompanied you here is a woman who was once my son's wife. I am sending her away at once. I expect you to care for my son yourself until I can make other arrangements." He paused then, and added, "Mrs. Chivory will help you if you need her."

He stood on the hearth-rug waiting for me to say, "yes, sir" (and, unless I was wrong, a little afraid I wouldn't). He was not a tall man, and he was rather muscular and thick; he had a brown face, a sharply aquiline nose and a bearded chin. His eyes were heavily lidded and rather bright in color. He was a little bald; he wore, besides the somewhat stringy beard, a short gray mustache with two sharply waxed points at either side.

Just above him on the breast of the mantel was a coat of arms, carved and painted in somber, rich colors; it was an animal, an obese and undentifiable creature which may have been a unicorn, standing sportively on one leg on a bit of green. The coat of arms was not quartered, which was unusual and showed me how old the direct line must be. It might have showed me too, but I didn't think of it then, the deliberate casting away of all the hundreds of intermingling and intertwinning blood streams in order to cling with absurd stubbornness and self-deception to one chosen ancestral line.

I didn't consciously think of anything however but Drue. I said, so emphatically that my voice rang out against the dark woods and books and red leather of that study, rather more loudly than I intended, "I'm afraid Miss Cable will have to stay."

"I beg your pardon," he said, although he couldn't have helped hearing me.

I made it clearer but lower in tone. "You can't send Miss Cable away. She is here as a nurse. We are both needed."

"We can get another nurse from New York by morning. Tell her to be ready to leave in half an hour."

I suppose he was not often defied, so, whether his arrogance was assumed or real, obviously it worked. He just didn't believe my own opposition. So I took a long breath and walked up nearer him. "Look here," I said, "do you want your son to die?"

That touched him. Something flinched and moved back of his bright eyes and one hand reached out toward the tall back of a chair near him. He said, "He's not going to die," and looked at me as if daring me to deny it, but it had frightened him all the same.

"Twenty-four hours—thirty-six at the most will tell the tale. If things go well, there's not much for us to do, only routine. If things go wrong, that's different. I'd advise you to let her stay. Besides, he knows she's here." That told on him too; I saw it again in the flash, away back in his eyes.

"I thought he was unconscious. Chivory told me he would be unconscious for some time."

"He roused a little, said a few words and then went back to sleep."

"I said . . ." he began quickly, checked himself, and then resumed in a more deliberate way. "What did he say?"

"Sorry," I answered. "I'm a nurse. Dr. Chivory reminded me of my oath. Florence Nightingale, you know," I said gently, and watched the purple come up into his cheeks and lips. Too much purple, in fact, in his lips. I couldn't help making a mental note of it.

"Florence Nightingale blazes!" he snapped. "I'm paying you. I'm his father. What did he say?"

He glared at me and I looked back at him, murmuring, "Sorry, is that all?" and made a motion toward the door.

"Wait a minute," he said abruptly when I touched the doorknob. There was a short pause. Somewhere a clock was ticking in a measured way. It was almost dark by then and heavy red curtains had been drawn over the windows and one or two table lamps had been lighted. A candle coal fire was burning in the hearth below the coat of arms; a lump cracked open and sputtered; blue sparks shot upward as Conrad Brent asked, "Did he say anything about the accident?" and lifted his light eyes to watch me.

Well, there he had me. In spite of the antagonism Conrad Brent had instantly roused in me, it was clearly my duty to tell someone in authority of the thing Craig had said. So I did.

"He said, well, as a matter of fact, he said this: 'But that's murder. Tell Claud.' And then he said, 'There'll be murder done.'"

I watched Conrad Brent, and he looked back at me without the slightest change of expression. That was rather odd because he ought to have been a little startled. He ought to have questioned me too; but he didn't. After a long moment he only shrugged. "Delirium. Obviously."

And Conrad Brent added, "And he did recognize the—the woman?"

I discovered a streak of sadism in my nature and said archly, "Oh, definitely."

That affected him as the other hadn't. He didn't have a stroke, but it was touch-and-go for an instant. Then abruptly he crossed to the long, polished desk which stood in the window embrasure. He put his thumb hard upon a bell there and when Beevens opened the door, he sent for Drue.

"Tell Anna to stay with Mr. Craig," he ordered. "And bring the other nurse here."

Beevens said, "Very good, sir," and vanished.

"I've got to go back to my patient . . ."

"But . . ."

"Anna took care of him till you got here. She can do it for another five minutes."

He didn't ask me to sit down, and he didn't sit down himself. But after a moment of staring down at the desk, he turned and lifted a crystal decanter that stood, with small glasses, on a silver tray. There was brandy in the decanter. When he had offered me some and I shook my head, he poured a generous amount which he drank quickly. I rather felt that he was fortifying himself against the coming interview, which bore out my curious, but thus far unsubstantiated, impression of him.

LET THE WEAK HAND PLAY

WHEN A WEAK hand with a long suit is laid down on the table as dummy, it is usually worthless to declare at No Trumps or to one who is playing at his own suit if the dummy has not a decent number of trumps. But with the same two holdings, the pair might be in fine shape if the weak hand with the long suit is declarer and the strong hand is laid face up on the table. That powerful hand is bound to make a good dummy.

Oh what a slaughter! West led the club 6, the K forcing the A. Hoping against hope that he could use the dummy's spade length, South led the K. East won with the A and shot back the club 3, the Q knocking off the J and the 4 coming back to the J. South cashed the spade Q, which dropped the J, but left the 10 out. Hoping for some return lead that might help him, he led to that spade 10, whereupon West cashed the club 9 and 8.

West returned the heart J. Seeing his cause was hopeless, South took this with the A, scored his diamond A and then led the diamond 9, making the J and K both good, and the heart K got the trick. He was down three tricks, for a score of 300. If either East or West had doubled the 2-No Trumps, North might have taken out to 3-Spades, which had a good fighting chance to get made in case North played ably.

South should not have bid the 2-No Trumps. When North could not call over the original 1-No Trump, with the side using strong No Trumpers, he screamed about his weakness, and his later suit bid over East's call should have been a definite command to South to cease firing. The 2-Spades would have been unbeatable, even with indifferent play by North.

YOUNG RETAINS SCORING LEAD IN THE BIG 10

CHICAGO, Oct. 25—Claude (Buddy) Young, Illinois' fleet half-back, retained his lead in scoring and ground gaining in the Western football conference although Illinois played outside the conference, against Pittsburgh, last Saturday, league statistics showed today.

His records are five touchdowns and 30 points for the scoring leadership and 285 yards gained for the top spot in the ground covering department in three games.

Buddy has just been accepted for military service, but it was believed he would finish out the football season as a civilian although he would not be able to defend his track titles next winter and spring.

John Yungwirth of Northwestern, a freshman like Young, completed four of eight attempted passes in the game the Wildcats lost to Indiana and held his lead in this department, having a mark of 21 completions for a total gain of 282 yards. Bob Hoernschemeyer of Indiana is second among the passers with 15 completions in 37 tries.

Ed Cody of Purdue and Bob Weise of Michigan are tied for second place in scoring honors, each having 24 points.

FLIERS TO TAKE PART IN EFTC CAGE TOURNEY

The Lockborne Fliers will be represented in the Eastern Flying Training Command's basketball tournament which gets underway the first week in December. It was announced today by Colonel John S. Gullet, commanding officer.

Eastern Flying Training Command officials staged a similar event last summer in baseball which proved a huge success. Because of the interest manifested in that tournament it was decided to arrange a cage tourney in order that the champion basketball team of the stations might be arrived at.

There will be 24 Army installations in the command seeking the honors. Each team will play a two out of three game series with the winning team advancing in tournament play.

The four semi-final clubs will travel to Montgomery, Ala., headquarters for the Eastern Flying Training Command where the championship set of games will be held Feb. 1, 2 and 3.

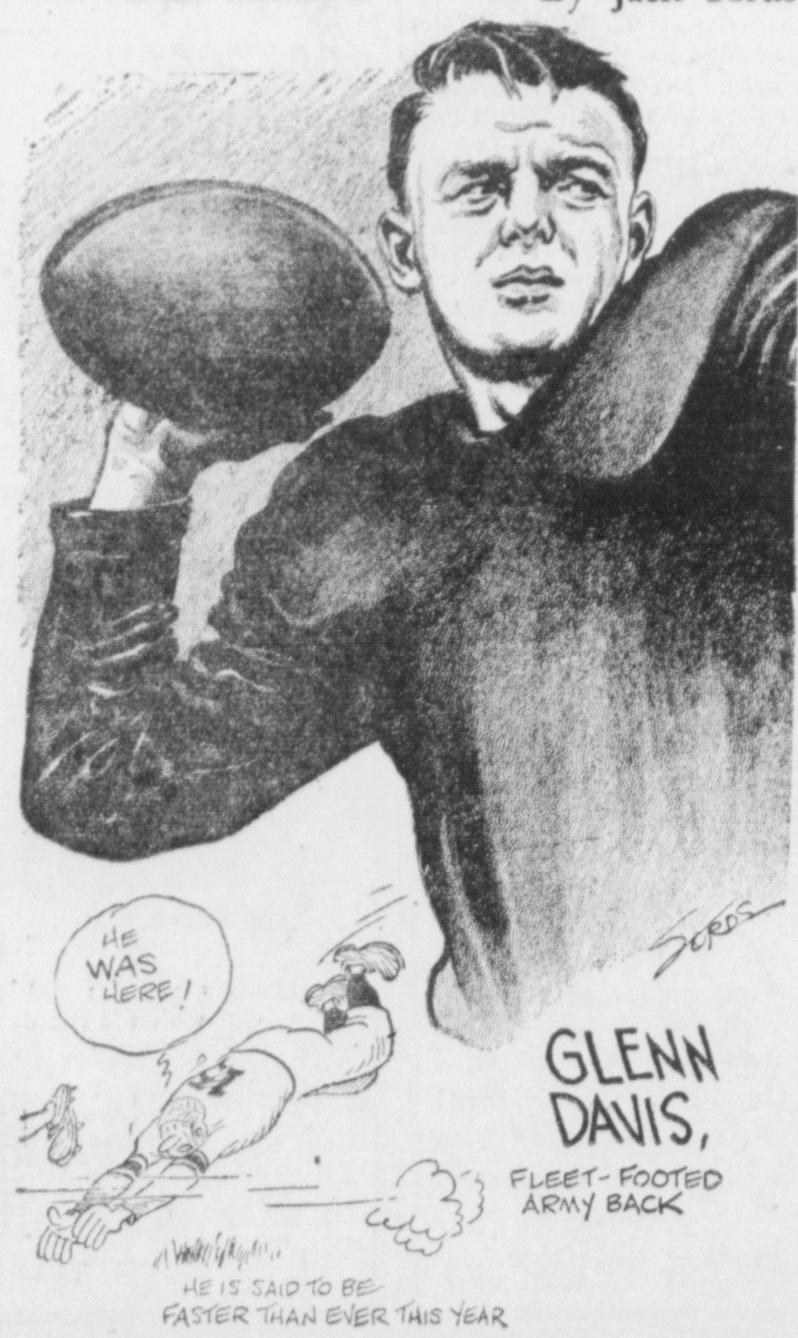

Lockborne and Freeman Army Air Field of Seymour, Ind., have been bracketed in District A and will compete against each other for the right to play the winner of District B, which includes teams from Smyrna Army Air Field, Ala. No dates have as yet been agreed upon for the Lockborne-Freeman games. They must complete their first round games by Jan. 8, and the second round by Jan. 22, 1945.

SCO TITLE MAY BE SETTLED ON THURSDAY NIGHT

CHS Tigers Have Chance To Become Big Favorite For 1944 Laurels

Circleville high school Tigers Wednesday were winding up preparations for that all-important game Thursday night at Greenfield.

The game, first on a foreign field this season for the Tigers, probably will decide the South Central Ohio league championship and both teams will be trying their best to grab off the laurels.

The Greenfield team is reported to be big and fast. The only blot on the record of the Highland county outfit is a tie with Linden McKinley last week. The Tigers have rolled over Wilmington and Washington C. H. with ease. Washington was beaten 39-6 and Wilmington 21-0.

The local Tigers have a better record with five straight victories but the opposition for two of the games was not as strong as some met by the McClain Tigers.

Williams, big fullback, and Mercer, rabby quarterback, usually carry the ground-gaining burden for Greenfield. Williams cracks the line while Mercer sweeps the ends. That combination accounted for the scoring against Washington and in most of the games played by Greenfield. The team seldom tries a kick for extra point; the ball is given to Williams who runs it over behind the heavy forward wall.

The Greenfield lineup Thursday night probably will find Baxia and Raika, at ends; Uhl and Glassner, tackles; Loggans and Sullivan, guard; Barnes, center; Mercer, quarterback; Elberfeld and Whitely, halfbacks, and Williams, fullback.

Coach Roy Black probably will use about the same lineup which started in the Wilmington game. Dade and Gillis will start at ends, Lovenshimer and Connolly, tackles, Wells and Richardson, guards; Coffland, center; Sims, quarterback; Heath and Winner or Hennis, halfbacks. Hill, fullback. Several other regulars also will see plenty of action.

SINKWICH ADDS TO HONORS IN PRO GRID LOOP

CHICAGO, Oct. 25—Franklin Sinkwich, the high-powered Detroit Lions halfback, bobbed through and around the Chicago Bears' line last week for 95 yards to increase his ground gaining lead in the National Football League, official statistics showed today.

Averaging just a shade under four yards on 25 attempts, Sinkwich brought his total to 228 yards, 73 more than Bill Paschal of New York, the individual defending champion. While scoring the Giants' three touchdowns in their 23 to 0 triumph over the Card-Pitt combine, Paschal pilled up 89 yards in 14 tries.

Paschal's total was five more than that of Johnny Grigas, Card-Pitt fullback, who moved up to third place with 214 yards in four games.

Last week's big producers, however, were Tom Colella of the Cleveland Rams, who rolled up 147 yards against the Green Bay Packers; Tony Canadeo of Green Bay, who had 107 yards, and Bob Westfall, the Detroit rookie from the University of Michigan, 104 yards. Against the Bears Westfall got away for a 75 yard touchdown run, while Colella duplicated the feat against the Packers.

Frank Filchock of the Washington Redskins, pulled farther away from the field in the race for individual passing honors, completing 15 of 26 attempts for 190 yards and another touchdown while Washington was squeezing out a 17 to 14 win over Brooklyn.

Howie Livingston, New York's rookie halfback, took over the lead in interceptions with four good for 19 yards return.

RADIO NEWS NOTES

"Suspense" for Nov. 30 has made one of the most unusual star-bookings in its long series of off-the-track programs. It has signed the famed swooner Frank Sinatra to do his first straight dramatic role on or off the air. And they will not let him sing a note! Sinatra, the idol of teenagers, has been cast as an insane gardener!

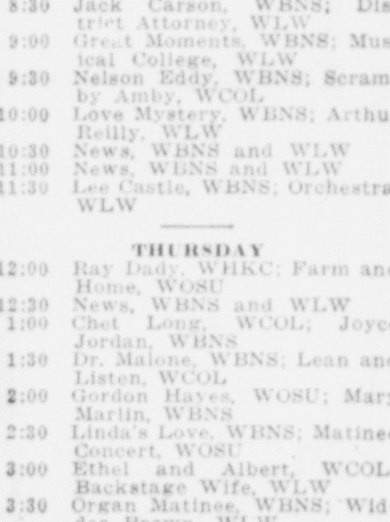

Dunniger, the Master Mentalist, won't return to New York with his program until Wednesday, Nov. 22. San Francisco is his next stop; with his Oct. 25 airing coming from there.

Look for more love scenes—wholesome, domestic ones—on the "Blondie" broadcasts in the future. Fan mail lately indicates that dialers want "Blondie" and "Dagwood" to bill and coo more often and to squabble less!

Next month the "Grand Ole Opry" celebrates its nineteenth anniversary on the air. Starting out back in 1925 as a local show in Nashville, Tenn., (where it still originates,) with one fiddler and the Solemn Old Judge as announcer, the "Grand Ole Opry" has grown to coast-to-coast dimensions and now ranks close to the top among all radio shows in listener appeal. The popular series is heard over 130 stations each Saturday night.

"Let's Meet Tonight By Thought Projection" is the newest zany tune to make the rounds of the New York song publishers. Written by Emanuel Schultz and Joe Dorko, the theme is based on the thought sending actually done each Wednesday night by Dunniger, the Master Mentalist!

Many of our customers are disappointed and angry because we can not make deliveries for them any day in the week. Florists are not essential to the War Effort so ALL florists are governed by the rules of the Office of Defense Transportation which limits florists to one retail delivery each week except for hospital and funeral flowers. Three deliveries are allowed to hospitals. These are not our rules and violation means cancellation of our permit to use our truck for any deliveries. We realize that not all florists live up to the O. D. T. rules but we feel it our patriotic duty to follow them to the letter. Since the majority of our orders are for week end delivery, we set Saturday as the one day each week to make retail deliveries. Brehmer Greenhouse.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

reads over the speech a half dozen times, has his confidential secretary, blonde, little, tireless Lillian Rosse, type it over in large, readable type. Dewey's own copy of the speech then goes to Lockwood, whose job it is to lay the manuscript on the rostrum when Dewey appears on the platform.

IF HE CAN'T LICK 'EM, HE HIRES 'EM

Dewey has had his tiffs along the trail to the big leagues. Opponents he couldn't lick he has signed up for his team. One good example is young Jim Hagerty of the New York Times. Hagerty covered Albany, also covered Dewey's 1940 Presidential candidacy bid, frequently annoyed Dewey with his questions. Dewey once denounced Hagerty, charged him with misquoting a speech about Ham Fish. Another time, Dewey bawled Hagerty out because the Times didn't run one of his speeches on page one. But when Dewey's press relations reached an all-time low after he became governor, he hired Hagerty, gave him plenty of elbow room to straighten out diplomatic relations between himself and the Fourth Estate.

Hagerty has succeeded in getting the press to like him, has not been too successful in getting the press to like his boss.

Dewey hired Elliot Bell after Bell helped him for the 1940 GOP nomination. In that race, Bell was an intimate of Wendell Willkie, helped steer Willkie's campaign.

LOCKWOOD TALKS BACK

Lockwood, sole original member of the Dewey ball club, who still remains in the inner circle, joined Dewey when the GOP nominee was appointed district attorney. Lockwood, ex-Brooklyn reporter, was then working up a thriving law practice, was told by friends: "Dewey won't ever amount to much." A bachelor, weighing close to 240 pounds, Lockwood slaved night and day for Dewey, helped win many a big law case because he enjoyed staying in the office at night reading criminal reports on pending prosecutions, found them better reading than detective stories.

Despite his bulk, which he carries around at a tireless pace night and day, Lockwood sleeps little, used to spend the early hours of the morning at the Stork Club. New York, finally gave up the night club life when Dewey won the nomination. Lockwood's ease with people also went a long way toward selling hard-headed politicians on Dewey and bringing the "financial fatcats" in to stake the early Dewey campaign drives.

Result of this experience is that Lockwood is almost the only man outside of GOP National Committee Chairman Herbert Brownell who can talk back to Dewey, make him listen and like it.

Dewey's research department on the eleventh floor of the De Witt Clinton hotel is known as the "squirrel cage," is off limits for newsmen.

DEWEY SIDELIGHTS

The Duke and Duchess of Windsor attracted attention during Governor Dewey's foreign policy speech in New York, when they sat in a front box, applauded the GOP nominee's attack on the New Deal foreign policy. . . . Information, Please expert "F. P. A." candidate for the State Senate in Connecticut, walked in front of Dewey wearing an FDR button. . . . Mrs. Vincent Astor waxed enthusiastic over Orson Welles' rebuttal to Dewey, while Editor Ogden Reid yawned. . . . Welles is proving one of the most dynamic Roosevelt speakers, campaigns nightly at mass meetings. . . . Welles loves to appear in the enemy camp, battle it out with hostile audiences. His voice is so deep and booming he can outshout the hooters. . . . Dewey has had almost phenomenal luck with the weather during his campaign thus far. In more than 11,000 miles of travel since nominated, he has never had rain on any day he was scheduled to make a public appearance.

Congressman BREHM Replies to Opponent's Attacks

I had hoped that this campaign would be devoted to discussing the issues so vital to our National Welfare.

However, since my opponent has by innuendo inferred that I am guilty of graft and intent to break the law, I must reply.

Here is the Public Record

I. All of my campaign literature, including letters, cards, printing and postage, was paid for with my personal checks, and not furnished at government expense.

II. My personal check was also deposited with the U. S. Treasury, to be held in escrow, as a guarantee for payment of postage on the very letters my opponent is talking about.

III. If my opponent had been as much interested in the taxpayers' welfare as he was in attempting to smear me, he could have ascertained these facts, before his fancy took flight.

Issues Challenge

1. I publicly defy my opponent to file charges of graft against me.
2. I publicly defy him to file charges of fraud or intent to defraud against me.
3. I publicly defy him to charge me with personally receiving one cent of the money which is appropriated for secretarial purposes or that I will receive $34,400.00 for my two years' service as Congressman.
4. I publicly charge his attack to be cheap political propaganda and the voters who know me will recognize it as such.
5. If he has knowledge of Graft, Fraud, Collusion or Corruption, it is his duty, either to prefer charges or publicly retract his infamous innuendoes.

To My Constituents

I want to warn you that if history repeats itself, other trumped up charges will appear so close to election that I will not have time to prove them false before November 7, so be on your guard.

The facts stated above are public records, and may be seen by any one who so desires.

Sincerely your congressman,

DR. WALTER E. BREHM
